

Accu-Spec Electronic Services,
v.
Central Transport International, and Logistics Plus, Inc.,
CIVIL ACTION NO. 03-394 ERIE

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY

I.

(INTRODUCTION)

Ladies and gentlemen, it is now my duty to tell you about the law that is to be applied to this case in which you will be the finders of fact. You have heard all of the arguments and all of the evidence, and it is my function to charge you on the law which you are required to consider and which will govern your deliberations.

This is a dispute between Accu-Spec Electronic Seviles Inc., the Plaintiff, and Central Transport International, Inc. and Logistics Plus, Inc as Defendants. In these instructions, I will refer to the Plaintiff as "Accu-Spec." I will refer to the Defendants as "Central Transport" and "Logistics Plus."

In deciding these issues of fact, it is your duty, ladies and gentlemen, to follow these instructions. In doing so, you must take into consideration all of the instructions I give you, and not pick out any particular instruction and disregard another one. Your duty is to determine the facts from the evidence that has been produced in open court. You are to apply the facts as you find them to the law that I am giving you, and neither sympathy nor prejudice should influence you in any way. Our system of law does not permit jurors to be governed by sympathy, prejudice or public opinion.

II.

(COURT IS NEUTRAL)

At the outset, you should understand that I am absolutely neutral in presenting these instructions to you. I will not give you my opinion about any issue of fact to be determined by you. Nothing in the way in which I give my instructions to you is intended as an expression of my opinion about any fact at issue in the case.

III.

(SUBSTANTIVE PRINCIPLES)

Ladies and Gentlemen, I will now instruct you on the substantive principles of law that govern the Plaintiffs' claims in this case.

In January of 2003, Accu-Spec contacted Logistics Plus to arrange for a shipment of Accu-Spec's industrial x-ray machine from Fremont, California to Accu-Spec's facility in Erie, Pennsylvania. Logistics Plus did not physically transport the industrial x-ray machine from California to Pennsylvania, but made arrangements with a trucking company, Central Transport, to physically move the equipment. Central Transport is in the business of hauling freight in interstate commerce.

Thus, in this transaction, Accu-Spec is considered to be a "shipper." Logistics Plus is considered to be a "freight forwarder." Central Transport is considered to be a "motor carrier."

A law, adopted by the United States Congress, sets forth certain rules and principles concerning the relationship between shippers, freight forwarders, and motor carriers. That law establishes that a motor carrier such as Central Transport may be held liable for the actual loss or injury to property which it transports. That same law indicates that a freight forwarder, such as Logistics Plus, may be held liable for the actual loss or injury to property for which it arranges transport. Under this law, the shipper, Accu-Spec, does not have to prove that the motor carrier or the freight forwarder acted in a careless or negligent manner in handling the equipment.

In order for a shipper, such as Accu-Spec, to recover damages from a motor carrier, such as Central Transport, or a freight forwarder, such as Logistics Plus, the shipper must establish certain facts by direct or circumstantial evidence. Specifically, Accu-Spec, as the shipper, must establish three things.

First, Accu-Spec, the shipper, must establish, by direct or circumstantial evidence, that the equipment was given to the motor carrier, Central Transport, in good condition.

Second, Accu-Spec, the shipper, must establish that the equipment arrived in Erie, Pennsylvania either damaged or destroyed.

Third, Accu-Spec, the shipper, must establish the amount of reasonable money damages which it incurred in order to repair the industrial x-ray machine.

If Accu-Spec, the shipper, establishes that the equipment was given to Central Transport in good condition; returned from Central Transport in damaged condition; and the amount of money damages which Accu-Spec incurred, the burden then shifts to the motor carrier, Central Transport, or the freight forwarder, Logistics Plus, to demonstrate that they are not liable. The only means by which Central Transport or Logistics Plus can avoid liability for damages is if they can prove that the manner in which the x-ray equipment was packaged was improper and that the packaging was the sole factor in causing the damage.

If you find that Central Transport is liable, you must also find that Logistics is liable, and you must find them liable in the same amount, although there will be only one recovery.

I will now also give you a few guidelines on how to deliberate upon the evidence you have heard.

IV.

(EVIDENCE)

As I told you at the beginning of this case, the evidence which you are to consider consists of the testimony of the witnesses and the exhibits offered and received into evidence. The proceedings during the trial have been governed by rules of law, and we have had a number of conferences to determine what evidence should be allowed to be submitted to you.

From time to time, it has been my duty to rule on evidence to be submitted, and you should not concern yourselves with the reasons for those rulings. You are not to consider any testimony or any exhibit to which I have sustained an objection, or any exhibit which may have been ordered stricken from the record, or which has not been introduced into evidence.

The attorneys and parties have argued very ably and thoroughly, and they have been well prepared; but their remarks, that is, what they said to you, is not evidence. They have argued to help you understand the facts and their respective theories of the case, but their arguments, again, are not evidence. You must consider as evidence only the testimony and exhibits. If you find that any argument, statement or remark of counsel has no basis in the evidence, then you should disregard that argument, statement or remark.

Similarly, if you find that anything I tell you about the facts is not based on the evidence, you should disregard that, too, because you are the finders of fact. It is up to me only to tell you what the law is.

V.

(BURDEN OF PROOF)

The next matter about which I will now instruct you is the applicable burden of proof. The burden of proof is a concept which you must understand in order to give the case proper consideration because a verdict cannot be based on speculation, guess or conjecture.

In civil cases such as this one, the plaintiff has the burden of proving those contentions that entitle him to relief by a preponderance of the evidence. Thus, Accu-Spec carries the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the cargo was received by Central Transport in good condition, that the cargo arrived damaged in Erie, Pa, and the amount of the damage. If Accu-Spec is able to do so, the burden then shifts to Central Transport or Logistics Plus to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that the x-ray equipment was packaged improperly and that the packaging was the sole factor in causing the damage.

The fair weight or preponderance of the evidence means evidence which has more convincing force when it is weighed against the evidence opposed to it so that the greater probability of truth lies therein. If we visualize evidence as something weighed on an ordinary balance scale, and if the evidence admitted in support of a claim made by the party having the burden of proof is more weighty in probative value than the evidence offered in opposition so that it tips the scales on the side of that party, then that party has proved the claim by the fair weight or preponderance of the evidence.

If, on the other hand, the evidence admitted in opposition to the claim of the party having the burden of proof outweighs or equally balances the evidence produced in support of the claim, it can be said that there has been a failure to carry the burden of proof imposed by law.

It is important to note here that we speak of the quality of evidence, not necessarily its quantity. Also, all of the evidence admitted in support of, and in opposition to, a claim must be considered, and not just the evidence offered by the party having the burden of proof. In short, the test is not which side brings the greater number of witnesses or presents the greater quantity of evidence, but which witness or witnesses and which evidence you consider most worthy of belief. Even the testimony of one witness may outweigh that of many, if you have reason to believe his or her testimony in preference to their testimony.

VII.

(DIRECT & CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE, INFERENCES)

In deciding the facts of this case, members of the jury, you should consider all of the evidence presented by the parties. Consideration of all of the evidence, however, does not mean that you must accept all of the evidence as true or accurate. In this connection, the evidence in the case consists of the sworn testimony of the witnesses, regardless of who may have called them; all exhibits received into evidence, regardless of who may have produced them; and all facts which have been admitted or stipulated by the parties.

While you may consider only the evidence in the case in arriving at your findings of fact, you are permitted to draw such reasonable inferences from the testimony and exhibits of counsel, as you feel are justified in the light of common experience. An inference is not a suspicion or guess. A suspicion is a belief based on circumstances which do not amount to proof. A guess is speculation or conjecture. An inference, on the other hand, is a reasoned logical decision to conclude that a disputed fact exists on the basis of another fact that you know exists. In other words, you may reach conclusions which reason and common sense lead you to reach from the facts which have been established by a preponderance of the evidence in the case.

There are times when different inferences may be drawn from the facts, whether proved by direct or circumstantial evidence. Plaintiff will ask you to draw one set of inferences, while the Defendants will ask you to draw another. It is for you, and you alone, to decide what inferences you will draw.

VIII.

(DETERMINING CREDIBILITY)

Now, in deciding this case, members of the jury, you are required to pass on the credibility of witnesses. Credibility simply means believability. Your function is to decide what is believable, who is believable and how much weight to give it. In doing this, you use your common sense, your varied backgrounds and experiences, the usual indicators of truth that you use in your daily lives.

A witness's testimony depends on the witness's observation and perception of what he or she testifies to. It also depends on the witness's memory and what he or she experienced at the time, and the witness's ability to create that experience in court.

You may consider the degree of the witness's intelligence, the demeanor and appearance of the witness, the witness's frankness, his or her candor, the evasiveness or responsiveness, as well as the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the witness's testimony in light of all of the circumstances. You may also consider any interest or bias that might lead a witness to exaggerate, understate or otherwise color his or her testimony, such as a witness's interest in the outcome of the case or a bias or prejudice that a witness might have in favor of or against a party. This is not to suggest that the interest or bias of a witness would lead the witness to tell you a falsehood or color his or her testimony one way or the other, but bear these factors in mind in passing on the credibility or believability of every witness.

I charge you that if you find a witness has lied to you in any material portion of his or her testimony you may disregard that witness's testimony in its entirety. I say that you may disregard that testimony, not that you must. If you choose to disregard the testimony of any witness because you believe that the witness has been untruthful with you, it must have been untruthfulness in a material portion of that witness's testimony. You must be careful, though, that the untrue part of the testimony was not a result of a mistake or inadvertence, but was, rather, willful and stated with a design or intent to deceive.

Regardless of whether a witness's testimony is untruthful by design or inadvertence, however, you may reject all or any portion of the testimony, as in the case of any witness, if the testimony is not believable by you. On the other hand, you may be convinced that, despite the falsity of a part of the witness's testimony, he or she, in other parts, testified truthfully.

Now, you may find inconsistencies in the evidence, even actual contradictions in the testimony of witnesses, although it does not necessarily mean that any witness has been willfully false. Poor memory is not uncommon. Sometimes a witness forgets. Sometimes he or she remembers incorrectly. It is also true that two persons witnessing the same incident may see it or hear it differently. If different parts of the testimony of any witness or witnesses appear to you to be inconsistent, you should try to reconcile the conflicting statements, whether of the same or different witnesses, and you should do so if it can be done fairly and satisfactorily. If, however, you find that there is a genuine and irreconcilable conflict in the testimony, it is your function and your duty to determine which, if any, of the contradictory statements you will believe.

IX.

(DAMAGES)

If you find that Accu-Spec has established its claim against the Defendants, you may consider the amount of money to award Accu-Spec. Under the federal law which governs the relationship between shippers, freight forwarders, and motor carriers, the amount of money to be awarded to the shipper is calculated by the costs to repair the goods. The cost to repair the goods can include the reasonable cost of inspecting the equipment and of shipping the equipment to the place where it was repaired, in this case, England, if you find that shipping the equipment to England was reasonable.

X.

(COURT IS NEUTRAL; JURY AS FINDER OF FACTS)

As I mentioned at the beginning of the case, the court is entirely neutral about the outcome of the case. I do not want you to think that anything I have said, any instruction I have given you, any ruling I may have made on the evidence, or any statement I have made either to counsel or to you, implies that I have any position in this case at all, other than to give you fairly the law that you are required to apply, and to rule fairly and impartially on the evidence that has been submitted to you. I have absolutely no interest in how this case resolves itself, only in the procedure by which it is done.

As I told you before, it is for you, and you alone, to determine the facts of the case and the credibility of each witness. If your recollection of the testimony varies with any statements that are inadvertently made by me or counsel for any party in reviewing the testimony, you have to be guided by your own memory and your recollection of the testimony. You determine the facts from all of the testimony that you have heard, and the other evidence which has been received during the trial. Neither I nor anyone else may infringe on your responsibility as the sole judges of the facts. On the other hand, and of equal importance, you must accept the rules of law as I give them to you and apply those rules to the facts of the case.

XI.

(JURY'S CONDUCT DURING DELIBERATIONS)

Ladies and gentlemen, I am going to instruct you on your deliberations, what you are to do when you retire to the jury room. First, the attitude and conduct of the jury at the outset of the deliberations are matters of considerable importance. When you retire to the jury room for your deliberations, they should proceed in an orderly way. The first order of business in the jury room will be to select one of you to act as foreperson. You are free to select any one of you to act in that capacity. The foreperson will preside over your deliberations and will speak for you here in court, should that become necessary. One more thing about the foreperson. The fact that somebody is a foreperson does not mean that his or her vote is entitled to any greater weight than the vote of any other juror.

Now, in the course of your deliberations, if you should find yourself in doubt concerning any part of my instructions to you about the law, you may request further instructions. In that event, you should transmit a note, signed by the foreperson, to me through my courtroom deputy. Nobody should try to communicate with the court by means other than a signed writing. I will not communicate with any juror on any subject relating to the merits of the case except in writing or orally here in court with all counsel present.

You should not, at any time, reveal, even to the court, how you stand numerically until you have reached a verdict. Your responsibility to reach a fair conclusion from the evidence and the applicable law is an important one. Your verdict should be reached only after careful and thorough deliberations during which you should consult with each other and discuss the evidence and the reasonable inferences to be drawn from the evidence freely and fairly in a sincere effort to arrive at a just verdict.

It is your duty to consider the evidence with a view toward reaching agreement on a verdict if you can do so without violating your individual judgment and conscience. You must decide the case for yourself, examining the issue in evidence with candor and frankness, and with proper deference to and with regard to the opinion of each other. Mature consideration requires that you be willing to re-examine your own views and to change your opinions if you are convinced that your opinions lack merit or validity. On the other hand, while you may maintain this flexibility, no juror is required to surrender his or her honest conviction as to the weight or effect of the evidence because another juror's opinion differs from his or hers, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

The verdict must represent the considered judgment of each juror. In order to return a verdict, it is necessary that each juror agree thereto. Your verdict must be unanimous.

Keep in mind that the dispute between the parties in this case is for them a most serious matter. They and the court rely on you to give full and conscientious deliberation and consideration to the issues and evidence before you. You should not allow prejudice or sympathy to influence your deliberations. You should not be influenced by anything other than the law and the evidence in the case. All of the parties stand equal before this Court, and each is entitled to the same fair and impartial treatment at your hands.
